

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

June 25, 2009

I send my warmest greetings to all those celebrating the 100th anniversary of the American Association of Family and Consumer Sciences (AAFCS).

For the last century, the AAFCS has worked to improve the quality of life for Americans and their communities. By educating and empowering consumers and families on everything from nutrition to practical life skills, AAFCS professionals have touched the lives of countless people across our Nation.

I wish you all the best as you commemorate this important milestone and begin your journey through the next 100 years.
